What was the best thing about the Symposium?

- The presentations were quite good, as well as the questions
- Getting to know more about the new Scholars and their passions
- Quality of presentations, confidence of presenters, experience of presenting
- Being inspired by each and every presentation – such top-notch quality. Moreover the way parents and Scholars could intermingle really easily
- Everything
- The best thing for me was the Keynote Speaker as I always take a lot of information from the speeches and it sparks new ideas!
- How everybody was being so knowledgeable and nice to everybody, and how everybody's presentation was so good
- The best thing about this was how everybody was involved and answered questions nicely
- Listening to the other Scholars speak and hear what they had to say
- The way the Scholars were very confident and the way we learned more about citizenship and service
- The fact that we are encouraged to do more and do things like this in all we do
- I loved hearing about other people's citizenship projects and asking questions to learn more about what great things people are doing to instigate change
- It made me learn about everyone and to know them better to see what people are passionate about
- The variety of the projects
- The Scholars' confidence and determination about their projects
- Seeing the younger Scholars do so much. Seeing them analyse statistics and conduct face-to-face interviews with people at that age is amazing

What could be improved?

- The activities could be improved a bit, as well as the breaks
- Nothing should be improved apart from projecting voices a bit more
- Some small timing issues. Giving a handout with a brief summary of all the projects would help people remember/follow the projects better
- My presentation and project choice for next year, along with my public speaking
- My speaking
- More activities as sitting down and listening can be quite draining. Also a turn for parents to make some speeches?
- Maybe voice projection
- Big and successful people could come and speak to the parents and Scholars about their life stories
- Nothing, it was amazing
- Snack breaks – there are a lot of breaks
- From experience, I think new Scholars do need just a little more push, but not like training wheels
- Everything was excellent and I loved it!
- The confidence and posture
- Nothing much. Maybe a microphone for the younger ones! And a site where they can upload their proposals

Would you like to say anything else?

- I really enjoyed what happened today and hope next year's is even better
- Very interesting presentations, even better when presentation was done for a second year on a project
- No thanks
- No thank you
- Three years so far and it has been so humbling to give back to the community. Many thanks for making it possible
- To thank Beacon for making this day happen
- No
- I really learned a lot. The other Scholars projects really opened my eyes and helped me realise that there are so many people in need of helping
- Thanks to the Beacon for entering me into the beacon family
- I have learnt so much and seeing the projects encourages me on my future projects
- Thank you so much for having me on the programme, and for a great day. Wish we could have more of these
- Thank you for the opportunity
